Commencement: A Historical Tradition

EVERY YEAR AT COMMENCEMENT AND CONVOCATION students pile into an auditorium where they sit through a ceremony of grand formality and time honored traditions. But the significance of these ceremonies is oftentimes lost on students, who will most likely only see them performed once or twice during their four years at Pacific. One may find themselves asking who are all the (elderly) people walking around with roses, why is President Eibe holding a medieval weapon and why is everything color coded?

Students may be surprised to know that there is a significant and history behind most, if not all of the activities during the ceremonies of commencement. They are traditions that create the foundation for and legitimize an event which represents not only the completion of your education at Pacific, but a rite of passage into adulthood. Commencement represents your acceptance into a family of thousands of people who all attended University of the Pacific and share memories of an experience that changed their lives for years to come. So here, for the benefit of all students who hope to join the ranks of alumni in the near or distant future, is your cram-guide commencement:

The Mace: Is not just a weapon from medieval warfare, it became a symbol for academic institutions as early as the 16th century. Our mace was a gift from a Regent of the university, Mrs. Winifred Olson Raney, and was designed by Stuart Devlin, an internationally known London Silver Designer. It was first used at a Founders Day ceremony on March 6, 1966, and is constructed entirely of silver with a gold plated seal of the University in its head.

The Memorial Rose Walk: The fiftieth reunion class was annually at commencement carrying orange roses which represent their colleagues who could not attend the ceremony. The roses were placed in a large urn at the front of the platform and represent the 50th reunion class.

School and College Banners: Each Banner has a field of white at the center which symbolizes the arts and letters which form the basis for all of Pacific's academic programs. Every banner contains the school's symbol and is set on a color backdrop which relates to the discipline. These are gold for COP, pink for the Conservatory, blue for the school of education, green for pharmacy and health sciences and beige for business.

Theodore B. Olsen '62 COP 2012 Commencement Speaker

BY KARLA CORTEZ, COPY EDITOR

Nationally recognized attorney Ted Olson COP '62, who is known for such high profile cases as the Bush v Gore Supreme Court case of 2000, and who also served as the United States Solicitor General during the Bush administration, will be speaking at this year's commencement. Olson attended Pacific where he attained his undergraduate degree, and had an extremely successful career in forensics under the guidance and tutelage of his coach Paul Winters. Olson graduated from University of the Pacific cum laude and with honors for being an outstanding student both in forensics and journalism.

In an interview Olson commented on his experience of being on Pacific's Forensics', "I am grateful to have attended Pacific ... along with some incredibly gifted fellow students, in Paul Winters' forensic program and, to have learned so much about the skills one needs in life from dedicated, unselfish and patient teachers." Raoul Kennedy COP '65, a colleague of Olson's who was also a member of Pacific forensics commented, "I personally feel a debt of gratitude to Ted because, along with his partner John Breyer, he put Pacific on the map in the debate world. That allowed Coach Winters to get the funding which allowed Doug Pipes and I... to compete for the National Debate Championship."

"My enormously absorbing and challenging work in forensics and journalism provided invaluable preparation... My intense focus on learning how to write, and to speak clearly and persuasively, helped to provide a superb foundation for the study and practice of law," commented Olson, who after graduating from Pacific attended law school at UC Berkeley.

Olson has been extremely successful in his career serving as Assistant Attorney General during the Reagan Administration, and was also selected by Time magazine in 2010 as one of the 100 most influential people in the world. When commenting on Olson and his career, Douglas Pipes COP '65' commented, "He became solicitor general, which for an attorney, I think is the number one position to ever be appointed to in the entire country. That is the prime position to have... That is all you have to say about how good he is as an attorney."

"I have been privileged during my nearly 50 years in the law to have worked on some very significant, historical cases. Those experiences have, naturally, been demanding, exciting and gratifying. Each such experience requires intense preparation, organization, and creativity. It also helps to be in the right place at the right time," noted Olson when asked about his professional success.

Mr. Olson who will be speaking at commencement on the year of his 50th reunion will also be inducted into Phi Beta Kappa, the nation's oldest honor society as an honorary member during the ceremony. "I had planned to attend the reunion, and when asked by President Eibeck to deliver the commencement address, I was, of course, honored and delighted to accept," said Olson who plans on speaking about his experiences at Pacific and some of the lessons that he learned.

"I cannot think of another person so accomplished, so full of personal conviction, and who better embodies Pacific's values," commented Pamela Eibeck in a press release made by University of the Pacific.

"I think Ted is an outstanding commencement speaker choice. After Dave Brubeck, he may be Pacific's best known graduate thanks to his work on Bush v Gore, the Gay Marriage cases... He also represents the student who was able to attend Pacific only with scholarship aid and worked to repay Pacific for that opportunity," stated Raoul Kennedy.

Kelly Walker '12 SIS 2012 Student Commencement Speaker

Kelly Walker

Kelly Walker is a graduating student from the School of International Studies, who will be the student graduation speaker. Walker's speech will emphasize the themes of passion, developing deep relationships, and risk taking - three qualities he developed during his time at Pacific.

"To me, the Pacific experience is not only the opportunity to educate oneself, but also the last chance to exclusively pursue what you're passionate about. While we're at Pacific the realities of 'real life' are kept at bay. We have the chance to make close friends and hone in on what makes us happy. Those two things will become a foundation for a successful future," Walker said.

During his time at Pacific, Walker joined organizations such as the Council of Social Entrepreneurs (he was President his sophomore year) and Theta Chi, and he was a student advisor. His Pacific education allowed him to leave the country multiple times; he interned at an orphanage for six weeks in Vietnam and studied abroad in Beijing his junior year.

His favorite memories at Pacific occurred in the library. "I think everyone who spends a good deal of time there knows it's by far the most social place on campus. Some of the best conversations I've ever had occurred while taking a study break during the late hours of the night," he explained.

Faith Davies Awards 2012 Award Recipients

BY JULIENE SESAR, LAYOUT EDITOR

Pacific students, faculty, and staff are welcome to celebrate together the recipients of the Faith Davies Awards (FDA) tomorrow at a luncheon in the DeRosa University Center Ballroom.

Paul Davies Jr., a former Board of Regents member and a current financial supporter of Pacific, endowed the FDA to honor his mother, Faith Davies.

This year, with 48 applications received, the FDA Committee had a difficult time deciding on winners.

"We're looking for a well-rounded, kind of like a holistically educated, person," said Jason Velo, Co-Chair of the FDA Committee and Director of Student Life at Pacific. Velo also commented that one of the harder awards to decide on is the Outstanding Student Leader Award.

"I was very surprised to receive the Outstanding Student Leader Award! My peers, professor, and supervisor were very good at hiding the nomination from me," said one of the recipients, Carina Oropeza, CO 2012. "I had no idea until my supervisor rushed me into the office and had me open the letter announcing the award."

Another award that proved difficult to choose a winner for was the Dochterman Outstanding Junior Scholarship. The two winners, Collin Grant and Stephanie Labasan, will receive a scholarship from the award with their financial aid packages next year. The amount of the scholarship is yet to be announced.

"I believe I am an outstanding student because I made it a point to not only be focused on earning my degree, but also to become involved with various organizations on campus," said Labasan. "As a freshman, I knew I wanted to dedicate myself to meeting as many new people as I could in order to find my place in my new community here at Pacific. Thus far in my undergraduate career, I have been involved in the SOECS, intramural sports, Greek life, and the Center for Community Involvement. When leadership opportunities were available, I took advantage of them in order to positively influence the organization at a higher level."

President Pamela A. Eibeck will begin the luncheon welcoming everyone to the event, Hamza Sledidui will perform a spoken word, and Sugar Water Purple will also sing before lunch is served. The award winners will then speak and the two surprise faculty or staff members for the Podesto Award for Excellence in Student Life, Mentoring, and Counseling will be announced.

Pacific Students Awarded Fulbright Fellowship to Teach English in Russia

BY SARA MENGES, NEWS EDITOR

This year Pacific is proud to have two of their students awarded with the prestigious Fulbright Fellowship to go teach in Russia next year. This award is offered to individuals who are interested in either teaching or researching abroad and is issued by the United States Department of State. Both Julia Sasha Custer and Nicolas Freeman studied Russian at Pacific and have spent a significant amount of time abroad in Russia.

Started in 1946, The Fulbright Program awards up to 8,000 grants annually to students, foreign students, scholars, teachers, and professionals to go around the world. Approximately 310,000 people have participated in the Program since its inception and it currently operates in over 155 countries worldwide.

With this scholarship, both students will be able to teach English-language classes in Russia while having all their travel and room and board expenses while in the country covered. Having taught both students Russian during their time at Pacific, Professor Elena Savelieva Thompson has been credited by the candidates as a big influence towards their achievements.

"It really was the professors at Pacific who encouraged me to take language to another level and find new ways to apply and challenge myself," explained Freeman in an interview with Pacific about receiving the award.

Freeman will be graduating this semester with a double major bachelor's degree in Russian studies and international affairs and commerce. Custer will also be graduating this semester with a major in Russian and a minor in speech language pathology. Other students from Pacific are also currently in the running for top awards that have not yet made an announcement of their recipients, so keep an eye out for more exciting news of where graduates are headed after Pacific!

Students Take Initiative on Campus After Budget Changes

Student James Follet asks President Eibeck questions on the FY 2012-2013 budget this semester at a Town Hall Budget Meeting.

At the end of the fall semester at University of the Pacific students demand for lower tuition rates and an increase in financial support spiraled into a movement: Occupy Pacific.

Occupy Pacific came to campus with the hope of spreading knowledge of the current economic hardships of Pacific students and also gain more information regarding current national financial issues.

In response to student, faculty, and staff concerns, President Pamela A. Eibeck held a Town Hall Meeting and presented her Budget Recommendations to explain why there will be a raise in tuition and hear from students on campus about their concerns. Tuition for undergraduates will increase by 5.6%, which is lower than last years increase of 6.4%, but still a high increase comparatively to other universities.

Pacific is concerned about the proposed cut of 44% to Cal Grants for private universities because currently the university has 1,350 undergraduate students relying on Cal Grants.

"We cannot fill in that gap. That is a 5.7 million dollar drop in financial aid that goes to our students, and this is a very significant problem," said President Eibeck "First let me assure you that if your Cal Grant is reduced we will not reduce the institutional aid we provide to you. You may know that we talk about matching Cal Grants; in fact we do more than matching to Cal Grants, the average Cal Grant recipient at Pacific receives $17,500 in scholarships and grant funds. In other words, it is money you don't have to pay back. If your Cal Grant gets cut as a student you will still keep the rest of the institutional aid from the university."

Pacific Alumni Association passed a resolution in mid-February to oppose the Cal Grant cuts and insure financial aid for Pacific students. The Cal Grant cuts are still being decided and the official California budget is not due to be released until mid-July.

Zip Cars: Providing a Degree of Freedom

BY RYAN SPENCER, STAFF WRITER

The hassle of car ownership is a thing of the past. Zipcars for Universities solves the occasional demand by providing access to vehicles only when needed. Students can now sign-up for 24/7 self-service access to Zipcars on the Pacific Campus or around the city. Simply locate a car on the website, reserve on-line or via your phone, let yourself in with your Zipcard and drive away from the parking lot next to the DeRosa University Center. Low hourly and daily rates always include gas and insurance.

University Lofts

BY JESSE VOELKERT, LIFESTYLES EDITOR

A new and unique housing alternative was first offered to students in 2011-2012. When the Waterfront Hotel began near completion of their newly renovated University Lofts. The Lofts are part of a new business model that has become more common at other college campuses in the United States. The concept gives students the option to opt out of traditional university housing for something more akin to a hotel lifestyle, while maintaining competitive prices.

Ten Years of Remembrance: 9/11 Pacifican Special Edition

BY JULIENE SESAR, LAYOUT EDITOR

This fall, Pacific reached out and showed respect to the men and women who lost their lives on September 11th, 2001. It marked the ten-year anniversary of the tragic event and the third year of National Day Service.

National Day Service is dedicated to giving back to the community in any way possible and serves as a reminder of the day that so many Americans lost their lives.

The Pacifican dedicated a special edition to the remembrance of 9/11 and received 2nd place for Best Special Section (Division B) at the 2012 California College Media Association (CCMA) awards banquet in Fullerton, Calif. A copy of the newspaper can be viewed by visiting thepacifican.com.

The other two newspapers to place in this category were: University of California-Irvine's New University (1st place) and Humboldt State University's The Lumberjack (3rd place). Pacific is the only university of these three that doesn't have an embedded journalism program. In all, the CCMA hosted 37 schools at the conference and awards banquet this year.

The CCMA is dedicated to helping collegiate journalists make it into the field and gain the skill set to do well in their careers. This year the conference focused on marketing the individual brand. Students heard from people that are working directly in the field as well as admissions directors at some of the top journalism graduate programs.

Experts the students heard from included recent graduate, Sara Catania, Editorial Director for Digital Media at NBC4, Southern California; graduate school director, Leon Braswell, Director of Admission and Financial Aid at Columbia University's Graduate School of Journalism; and others working in the marketing side of journalism such as, Ryan Chartrand, Senior Social Media Strategist at Pechanga Resort & Casino and Amanda Dennin, Multimedia Advertising Consultant with Orange County Register Communications.

For more information on the CCMA's or to read the Pacifican's 9/11 Special Edition please visit the website at <http://thepacificanonline.com>.

Honorable Service: Pacific's Stockton Campus

Community service is one of the major pillars of University of the Pacific's philosophy. The 2011-2012 school year was a host to many returning service projects, as well as the inclusions of a few new ones.

One of Pacific's most signature projects have been the M.O.V.E. (Mountain Ocean Valley Experience) trips assigned to incoming freshmen every year. These trips range from the American River to the Marin Headlands. While each offer a chance to take in scenery and meet members of their class, they also give freshmen a chance to get their first bit of Pacific community involvement through a unique service project each trip undertakes.

The most important goal for Pacific-based service has been outreach towards the greater Stockton community, as shown by the recent "Beyond Our Gates" initiative to take what Pacific has to offer and share it with the rest of Stockton. Events such as the 13th annual Safe Trick-or-Treat gave other Stocktonian's a chance to get greater acquainted with the people at Pacific, as well as take advantage of Pacific's effort to provide a safe place for children to come and have fun. University of the Pacific was also the host to service projects like "Give Kids a Smile" which offered free dental care to children, and "MESA Day" which sought to inspire middle school and high school students to find excitement in math and engineering fields of study. "Warm a Winter Wish" gave Pacific students a chance to give a winter gift to somebody staying at the Woman's Center of San Joaquin during the holiday season. In addition, regular blood donations drives were hosted by various organizations inside of Grace Covell.

University of the Pacific's own Center for Community Involvement (CCI) continued to maintain active service as well. The CCI was host to a number of "Volunteer Action Groups" which dedicated time every weekend to different service projects throughout the community, such as veterinary clinics or the Stockton Homeless Shelter. The CCI also once again continued their Alternative Winter Break trip to San Francisco and Alternative Spring Break trip to Mexico to perform various acts of community service. In addition to all this, the CCI led Pacific students to clean up the Calvaras River.

Pacific's dedication to community service paid off in a big way this year. For the second time in the past four years, University of Pacific was recognized by the President's Higher Education Community Service Honor Roll. The undergraduates on the Stockton campus alone have logged in more than 10,000 service hours each year.

2012-2013 ASuop President and Vice President

BY SARA MENGES, NEWS EDITOR

This year's ASuop elections proved to be a close race to the finish as each candidate held a strong campaign. The winners and Pacific's new ASuop President and Vice President are Alan Hensley and Elena Goldfoos with a total of 287 votes of the 780 students who participated. This year's percentage of registered voters who participated in the elections was 20.1%, an improvement of almost 5% from last year.

Stephen Seely and Alexis Duclos, as well as Mekleet Aytenfsu and Graham Trauenick, were the other two pair of candidates running against Hensley and Goldfoos. All candidates were asked questions on the pressing concerns of Pacific students such as the recent budget cuts, Stag Stadium's closing, and how to help bolster student voice and opinions on campus.

Tiger Nights at Pacific

BY JAMES MENGES, CONTRIBUTING WRITER

Tiger Nights is a monthly series sponsored by Associated Students of the University of the Pacific (ASuop) Arts & Entertainment consisting of live entertainment, crafts, free give-aways, food and a great opportunity to make new friends. Free and open to all students, faculty and staff, Tiger Nights have been one of the most popular social programs on campus. Students from every school attended the events.

Throughout the year ASuop has continued its strong partnership with the Division of Student Life to provide opportunities for students to interact on a social level. Nathan Quist, 2010-2011 President of ASuop has said that "out of 10 students have attended at least one Tiger night during the year."

Every month Tiger Nights featured a different theme, holding events both on campus and in nearby Stockton. Some of the more popular events this past year have been Just Dance, where DJ Pork Chop energized the Hip Hop and Electronic Dance Floors, Casino Night where students had the chance to win a new TV, digital camera, and other prizes, the De-Stress Fest winter event and our most recent Tiger Nights Blow Out where students came to celebrate the end of the school year with a mix of carnival games, a Ferris wheel, prizes, food and live music.

The True Flavor of Stockton

BY NATALIE B. COMPTON, SOCIAL MEDIA COORDINATOR

People often put down Stockton without ever considering the gastronomical gems hidden throughout the city. Try these spots to taste the true flavor of Stockton.

The best new restaurant in town is Royal Siam: Modern Thai Cuisine. This place does not disappoint. Every dish tastes fresh and flavorful. Take the risk and try something new like pumpkin curry or volcanic chicken. Head to 6124 Pacific Avenue to try it for yourself.

Located 15 minutes away from campus, Tandoori Nites is worth the drive. This Indian food is as heavenly tasting as it is wallet friendly. The restaurant's lunch buffet is fabulous, but is not available to go. Some fan favorites are chicken tikka masala for meat eaters and aloo gobi for vegetarians.

You can't talk about Stockton restaurants without bringing up CocoRo. But the fan favorite can be expensive. Hit up happy hour from 5:30 to 6:30 PM for lower priced plates. This Miracle Mile gem can and should be enjoyed by all, even those who are short on cash.

Support local restaurants and spice up dinnertime by choosing one of these Stockton spots. For more information on these restaurants, check out the Pacifican's Facebook page.

Sugar Water Purple

BY JAMES MENGES, CONTRIBUTING WRITER

Since their formation in 2009, the Sugar Water Purple band has grown from a campus based improvisational jazz fusion ensemble, into a full-fledged neo-soul band. Lead by keyboard player, songwriter and composer Joshua Washington, who has arranged their original songs for the sultry voice of Jasmine Jordan, Sugar Water Purple has entertained music lovers in venues throughout Northern California including performances at Yoshi's, the renowned Jazz Club in San Francisco.

Band manager and trumpet player Dave Creel leads a dynamic horn section which includes Leander Tipseyon on alto sax, Karl Udang on tenor, and Isaac Lopez on the baritone sax. Jon Maurer adds his guitar riffs to Mathew Smith-Gentry's drums, and the bass of Michael Lee to create the funky sound they are becoming known for.

The band opened for Grammy award winner India Arie at the Black History month 2012 celebration in Stockton, receiving a standing ovation from the near 2000 enthusiastic fans. Their first album, Revelry, is available from CD Baby or iTunes. You can learn more about the band on their website www.sugarwaterpurpleband.com

Taking Baby Steps For Child Care

BY RYAN SPENCER, STAFF WRITER

Childcare is not something that most college students often think about, but a group of students in a Residence Assistance class known as SERV 57 came together to form the new student organization Taking Baby Steps with the purpose of bringing childcare to the Pacific campus. Destiny Robbins, founding President of the new club introduced the organization at an event this semester, stating "This is our movement, this is our reality right now, to bring child care services to Pacific."

The event featured an information table with statistics of a student survey on child care, where 58% of the respondents indicated a belief that the University has a responsibility to address child care issues, and 13% anticipated they would have a need for childcare services while enrolled at Pacific. Information handouts were provided as well as T-Shirts were sold to raise money for the project.

Providing childcare services costs money, and as budgets are scrutinized, innovative ways of funding need to be considered. Taking Baby Steps has already developed a solid number of partners and supporters: Parent Voices, Family Resource and Referral, the Woman's Resource Center, Up Til Dawn, WIC, and Black Family Day.

For more information or questions on how to get involved, contact Taking Baby Steps at pacificianstakingbabysteps@gmail.com.

Either way, feeling your bare feet on the grass is a pleasantly refreshing way to take a break from the indoors."*

NUTRICAT'S CORNER

BY ALEXANDRA CASPERO, CAMPUS DIETITIAN

Healthy for life: NutriCats top tips for health after college

Ok graduating seniors, this ones for you. If I could send each of you off with my favorite nutrition tips, this list would be it. Thanks for all your support of NutriCat over the past four years.

1. Try the 'un-diet': If there is one piece of advice I am most passionate about for life long health it would be to never 'diet'. Most diets are made to make you feel better on the outside while hurting your insides. Instead, practice Intuitive Eating. Honor your hunger and fullness levels and listen to your body. Read Intuitive Eating by Evelyn Tribole and Elyse Resch.

2. Exercise daily. Our bodies were made to move! Find what makes your happy and do it often. Whether its gardening, yoga, running, swimming, it doesn't matter as long as you stick with it. Exercise is not just good for your beach body it also keeps your bones, heart and brain strong. It is also one of the best ways to prevent diabetes. Consider that by 2050, experts expect one in three of us to have type 2 diabetes, practice prevention now.

3. Eat your veggies! Very few of us get enough vegetables in our diet. Get at least 1 serving of green vegetables a day and try to incorporate them at every meal. Vegetables help reduce inflammation which is directly related to most chronic diseases.

4. Practice Meatless Mondays. The benefits of meatless meals are good for your waistline, heart, and the environment and you don't have to give up meat all together to reap the benefits. Try going meatless once a week!

5. Rethink your drink: Drink more water

Drink less alcohol: more than likely your college experience came with a few all-nighters and I don't mean the studying kind. Take a break and allow your body to naturally detox. Excess drinking isn't healthy and increases your risk of fatty liver, breast cancer, heart disease and more.

Lastly, stay friends with NutriCat for reliable nutrition information. There is a ton of misinformation and dangerous advice floating around the Internet. Sensationalism sells, sound nutrition doesn't. Take care of your body, it's the only one you've got.

Attention Graduates: Join the Pacific Alumni Association!

BY JAMES MENGES, CONTRIBUTING WRITER

There is one thing that new graduates can do that other students cannot, and that is to join the Pacific Alumni Association (PAA). The PAA is the primary link for alumni to stay connected to the university. Its mission is to strengthen the relationships with alumni, students, faculty, and staff by hosting events and providing benefits and services that encourage participation in and awareness of the University.

More than 150 programs or events are hosted by the PAA each year, highlighted by the annual Pacific Alumni Weekend each June. This year's alumni weekend will be held June 22 to the 24th.

Alumni receive many benefits from their membership. You can join the more than 5000 other alumni on the Pacific On-line Community to stay in touch with friends and colleagues. You can also take advantage of the exclusive global travel programs, called Tiger Treks, for the sophisticated alumni traveler. Tiger Treks scheduled later this year include a European cruise, Waterways of Russia, Grand Danube Passages, and the Islands of Antiquity amongst others. For the local alumni, you can take advantage of campus benefits which include discounts on athletic events, bookstore purchases, as well as discounts on professional and continuing education courses. The Career Resource Center and Tiger Jobs listing are also available to help you reach your professional goals.

Alumni leadership is important to make the Association a success. The Board of Directors, committee members and volunteers are all made up of alumni. All committees are open to the general alumni population and like the Board of Directors, meet four times a year.

Besides the 30 member board, there are six key committees for alumni to serve on. These are the Awards, Marketing and Communications, Governance, Benefits, Faculty Relations and University Alumni Clubs Committees.

But that is not all. There are additional volunteer opportunities for Pacific alumni: Alumni Mentor Network to assist students with advice on career choice; Regional Pacific Club Volunteers that serve on a steering committee to plan alumni and prospective student events; Affinity Club and Student Event Volunteers which assist planning events for alumni and students that are usually held on evenings or weekends; Alumni Bloggers who lend their voice to our Pacific Alumni Association website; Reunion Committee Volunteers who serve as letter signers for reunion invitations, participate in discussions on reunion planning, and invite friends to the reunion; and Alumni Speakers who take the time to speak in a Pacific Seminar II Class.

To sign up, volunteer for a committee or program, or to just find out more about the Pacific Alumni Association check out the website: www.pacificalumni.org or contact them via email at pacificalumni@pacific.edu

Pac Ave Record Label:

Pacific's Independent Music Label

A course is currently being offered at the University of the Pacific called "How to run an independent music label". Presently it is being offered to students every other spring; however students are advocating for reformation to make it available every semester. The class offers the experience to utilize the skills that students have learned and apply them to real world scenarios. The class has since grown and expanded, including giving birth to an independent record label "Pac Ave Records". During the course, student's work hard to develop, produce, market, and release an album under the Pac Ave Records label.

The class is currently reaching out to all students to participate in the course as well as the Pac Ave Record label. John Ferguson, Vice President of Business Affairs and Finance commented on Pac Ave Record label and the class "In the near future, hopefully it will branch out from the business school." Ferguson expressed his hopes that the class and the label would hopefully attract more students, including students whose are not majoring in business or music. Artist and Repertoire representative, Megan Outly expressed her approval of the class's educational value commenting "The work is real. It is not just for class. You are putting a CD out. It's not like you are not seeing the real world applications".

"Anybody, literally anybody can use this class" Ferguson would go on to say in hopes that the course will garner enough popularity to be offered every semester. Advocating for the class and label, Megan Outly remarked that "Every little slip up drastically effected our release date, [however] if the first semester was finding the artist and recording, and then next semester the focus would be on marketing the album, that schedule would work better".

Even under difficult time restrictions, the course and Pac Ave Record Label were able to release their first successful album by The Brubeck Institute Jazz Quintet, entitled Origins. The release of Origins is a testimony of the student's hard work and application of their schooling, as the album is now available on iTunes, Amazon, Google Music and CdBaby.

The Job Market

BY MARGARET ROBERTS, CONTRIBUTING WRITER

Jobs are likely to be at the forefront of the minds of graduates as they walk across the stage on May 5th. The National Association of Colleges and Employers (NACE) surveys recruiters annually and the 2012 Job Outlook Spring Update, released March 2012, indicates a 10.2% increasing in anticipated hiring nationwide over last year.

The NACE report also suggests that regionally hiring will be even better in the West – up nearly 33% over last year. The majors in greatest demand based on the recruiter responses to the NACE survey include: Engineering (69%), Business (63%), Accounting (53%), Computer Science (49%) and Economics (22%) in the top 5. Modest demand for all Sciences, Communications and Humanities (range 19%-13%) were reported. Most telling for Pacific grads was the 35% jump in employers attending the 2012 Career & Internship Faire in early March. More than 75 companies attended seeking to hire our best talent!

If you are graduating without a job, don't despair! The Career Resource Center and Eberhardt School of Business' Career Management Center staff are available to help you all summer and beyond. Pacific extends free lifetime career services benefits to all alumni.

Battle of The Pacific Bands

Another first of the 2011-2012 year was the Music Management Club's first ever hosting of Battle of the Pacific Bands. Each band had to have at least one University of the Pacific student performing. Each band went through a series of performance rounds, until the final 3 were set to perform at the Lair. This year's winner was the Darien Fields Band, who won t-shirts and a chance to record a demo. The winner was chosen through a mix of audience and judge voters.

"Proof of the Pacific 'Sword in the Stone' from 1948"

Amos Alonzo Stagg has tremendously influenced the course of our campus' history, as evidenced by the trees and memorial in his honor located between Knoles Hall and the Eberhardt School of Business' Weber Hall.

Evidence of the sword remains set in the center of the stone, but at one point in time the handle overlooked the memorial and contributed a significant element in the designed scenery of our campus.

The whereabouts of the whole sword piece is unknown, and it is presently unclear if this campus feature will be restored to its former glory.

"La Pila: The Baptism"

Students of Elbert Covell College remember well the excitement, anticipation, fear and acceptance known through the ceremonial baptism, La Pila.

For a person's birthday, a holiday, as well as imaginary or innocuous reasons, a self-appointed squad of students would select someone and see them immersed in the fountain. This shared experience is celebrated by the Covell College Alumni, Covelianos, as an enjoyable and fun rite of passage. For the students of the Covell cluster college, all lived through the threat of being the next 'victim.'

Presently the fountain, located between Raymond Great Hall and Raymond Lodge, is less deep and less wide than it was in the time of the Covelianos. Through the smiles and stories, the La Pila student experience lives on in the hearts and minds of those who touched the water.

"Our Gifted Heritage"

The original drawing is by David Yendes '78, as was the sculpture for the Tully Knoles pedestal between Knoles Hall and Grace Covell Hall. Both the sculpture and this artistic rendering were Yendes' gifts to the University of the Pacific.

The artistic rendering is currently entrusted to the Pacific History Project Research Team, though presently the whereabouts of the sculpture is unknown as it no longer presides over Tiger Square.

Into The Great Wide Open:

Career Tips For Graduating Seniors

BY KELLIE OLIVER, CAREER COUNSELING INTERN

To all the seniors out there who are about to graduate, Graduating from college is a mixed bag of emotions. It is like the end of an extremely long and arduous uphill climb. Reaching the top ATLAST is a great accomplishment and should be celebrated with a triumphant shout into the sky! But the journey doesn't end there; in fact, it has just begun. Now you are about to set sail into a vast ocean of unknown struggles. The question is, will you be prepared to face these challenges?

I remember when I graduated with my bachelor's degree I, like many others, was unsure about how I wanted to use my education. I had no idea what path I wanted to take with my career. The stress of classes left me drained. By the time I graduated, I just wanted to decompress and relax for a while. One week turned into two, two weeks turned into months, and so on, until one day I realized I was totally disconnected from my field of study. I felt lost.

I searched for jobs on sites like Monster and Career Builder, but it only seemed like a massive amount of sales and clerical jobs, which I ruled out, (having been there, done that). It is not surprising that after several interviews, for jobs I did not even want, I still had no job offers. The feeling of pressure grew and I became sensitive to people's well intentioned inquisitions about my plans and future. I felt I wasn't living up to my own expectations, let alone the expectations of others.

Eventually, I gave up and started putting more energy into the job that got me through college. It wasn't until a few years later that I found a career path that allowed me to combine my interests and skills. Now I am in the business of helping others find their way and I love it, but getting there was not easy.

Everyone has their own journey to take. Finding your way takes time and effort. The timing almost never meets our expectations. Learning to accept and expect this can take some of the pressure off. It allows you to focus on the steps you can take now rather than the goal ahead. The most important thing is that you continue to move forward, allow yourself to make mistakes, and continue to learn and grow.

Your hard work and endurance should be rewarded. Spend some time just having fun, go on a vacation, or just lie around and be lazy for a while. But put a time limit on this. A week or two, even a month, just long enough to feel refreshed. Then start your job search slowly.

Be intentional about your search. Select your desired geographic areas, choose your industry(s), and identify companies to get you started. Plan your week and dedicate a limited number of hours to several different techniques.

Spending day in and day out on job boards and search engines and sending resume after resume out into the abyss, can be discouraging. You will be much more employable if you are able to remain positive and open.

Your first job, will likely not be your dream job, it is a stepping stone for gaining valuable work experience. Even though you have a brand new shiny degree, you still have to start at the bottom. The knowledge and experiences you have had in college will help you to excel in these starter positions. Dedication and motivation will propel you up the ladder. Instead of placing the importance on the job itself, focus on the company and the industry. Follow your interests and try things out. Find organizations whose mission and values match your own and target your search.

Supplement your search with networking strategies. There are jobs out there, but in this competitive market, networking is more important than ever. For some this may be more difficult to learn than others, but it is an important skill to develop and it does get easier with practice.

There are many different ways to network, find the methods that best fit your style. For example, you could join and participate in professional associations, conduct informational interviews, attend networking events, start/join a job club, find/become a mentor, volunteer at your favorite non-profit, or participate in online forums, just to name a few. Everyone needs to learn to use social media for networking. LinkedIn and Twitter are huge! Learn the dos and don'ts, but you will NEED to create a professional online presence.

Networking on and offline is also a method for learning industry language and issues. Becoming knowledgeable about keywords, buzz phrases, and hot topics will make you more effective at using job search engines, writing resumes and cover letters, and answering interview questions. Talking to people is a great way to learn whether or not a job, company, or industry is right for you. And it just might land you a job!

At the heart, networking is simply relationship building. The network you build should provide you with the support and accountability you need to keep the wind in your sails as you ride the waves and weather the storms of life after college.

Editorial: Make Yourself Employable

BY ALLYSON SEALS, EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

Founded on July 10th, 1851, the University of the Pacific has produced many successful and driven graduates over the years. As we are now reaching the Commencement and Hooding Ceremonies for the Class of 2012, it is crucial for all of us Seniors to remember the valuable lessons we obtained at Pacific, in order to gain ground for ourselves in our professional futures.

The Career Resource Center conducted a survey between the months of February and March 2011 in order to gain employment statistics on Pacific's undergraduate class of 2010. The results showed that out of that graduating class, 53.1% were employed, 33.4% were in graduate school, and 13.6% were unemployed and seeking work.

These statistics do not seem terrible to the average person, as the rate of unemployment in San Joaquin County at the time was 17.4%; however, it is still a major area of concern for us graduating Seniors of the Class of 2012. If 13.6% of us are unemployed next year, then that means approximately 125 of us will be jobless.

These statistics can seem to become very overwhelming to the "normal" graduate, but the major lesson to remember from Pacific this weekend is that not one of you is "just another" student. I have had the unique opportunity to work with many of you throughout my last four years at Pacific, and every one of you I have met has had something special about you. My advice for all of you for the future is to really reflect this weekend on what your special "something" really is and to bring that with you to all of your job interviews and places of work in the future.

Remember, Pacific promised us at Freshmen to give us a "real-world learning experience," and indeed, they accomplished that. Now, go use all of the lessons learned here (yes, even those from Pacific Seminar), and make yourself that employable graduate Pacific created you to be!

Softball

BY RUBEN DOMINGUEZ,
SPORTS EDITOR

The Pacific Softball team finished off a three-game sweep of Cal Poly over the weekend, taking the third game on Saturday in an offensive explosion.

Contrary to the first two games, which were both decided by one run, the final battle proved to be no contest. After jumping out to a 2-0 lead in the first inning, the Tigers' lead increased to 5-1 entering the sixth, thanks to a home run from Taylor Petty, CO '14. In the sixth, Petty and Amy Moore, CO '13, drove home an RBI as Pacific added three runs to the total. The Tigers held off a rally for an 8-3 win.

Pacific will next host UC Davis in a three-game series at Bill Simoni Field from May 4-5th. Following that, the Tigers will travel to Long Beach State, on May 11th doubleheader which will be made available to view on ESPN3.com.

Men's Volleyball

BY SARA MENGES, NEWS EDITOR

The men's volleyball team are saying goodbye to four seniors this year: Sean Daley, Florian Gornik, Ryan Spencer, and Dylan Walker. Although the team have hopes for a successful season next year, the achievements of these seniors will also be missed. Daley is considered one of the greatest blockers in Pacific's history holding the record for both All Time Blocks and Solo Blocks. Gornik is from Austria and ranks fifth at Pacific for his total of 928 kills. Although not an official Pacific record to break, Spencer also holds a personal record between student athletes. Jumping with a vertical of 66 and a half inches, Spencer broke the vertical jump record for Pacific's student-athletes that was set back in 2003.

Men's Waterpolo

BY NATALIE B. COMPTON, SOCIAL MEDIA
COORDINATOR

For a water polo athlete, most of one's life revolves around a pool and copious time is dedicated to perfecting technique and mastering the game. What happens when college is over? For some lucky players, graduating college is just the beginning of their athletic careers. But instead of staying in the same pool, these players will be treading water across the ocean to play abroad.

Water polo players who want to continue their careers post college have a tough time doing so in the United States. There are no competitive leagues set up that offer players year-round training. This forces athletes to move to Europe or Australia.

One such athlete is graduating senior Joey Doyle. The 6'4" attacker picked up water polo in high school and was recruited by head coach James Graham in 2008.

Water polo isn't Doyle's only talent. The communication major and business management minor was given the honor of Scholar Athlete in 2011. For Doyle, playing water polo is more than just a hobby. He will turn his talent into a career by traveling abroad to play professionally in the fall.

"I'll be headed overseas, either to Australia or Germany, to continue my career playing Water Polo," Doyle said. "I'm still deciding between the two, but hopefully I'll make a decision in the next couple weeks." Doyle enjoyed the constant mental and physical challenge of being a D1 athlete, but making it abroad is not a simple feat.

"In Europe, you have to be one of the top players in the United States to play over there," Pacific's head coach James Graham said. "The best players in the world play there."

This is not an understatement. In addition to ambitious college graduates, many of the US national water polo team members play in Europe to train for the Olympics.

Doyle and fellow teammate Lance Morrison will join a group of about five Pacific alums currently playing abroad.

Though his plans are not set in stone, Doyle is eager for the next step in his athletic career. "I feel great about graduating," he said. "I am excited for the future and making the most of whatever scenario I find myself in."

Swimming

BY SARA MENGES, NEWS EDITOR

Last month Pacific's swimming team had 18 of their student athletes selected to the Mountain Pacific Sports Federation All-Academic team. This is an improvement from last year's total of 13 swimmers. To qualify, student athletes must have a cumulative grade point average of 3.0 or higher and must be at least a sophomore who has completed at least fifty percent of team meets during the 2011-12 season.

Among the 18 students selected this year is Kevin Byers '12 who has consistently maintained a 3.5 GPA during most of his swimming career at Pacific. Byers swims the 100 yards butterfly which he holds the position of 3rd all time among Pacific athletes in that specific event.

This summer after graduation, Byers is going to continue to pursue his swimming career by trying out for the Olympics in the 100 meter butterfly event. Starting in the last week of June, Byers will have to go through various time trials before only 2 swimmers from all competitors are picked for each event.

"I'm really hopeful that I make it because I think competing at trials is seen by many as the highest level of competition in the USA," explains Byers when asked about his feelings on taking up such a challenging opportunity. "I just think it would be really cool to represent Pacific at that level."

Women's Basketball:

Completes Best Season in Program History

BY RUBEN DOMINGUEZ, SPORTS EDITOR

Before the 2011-12 season, the Pacific Women's Basketball team had just one 17-win season and had made only one postseason appearance (in 1995). With a great team effort, that all changed.

Pacific's amazing season began in a way that gave no one the impression of a season to remember. The team lost its opening game to Fairfield before a 112-53 shellacking against #3 Connecticut. A one-point loss to St. Mary's in the home opener dropped the Tigers' record to 0-3.

Resolved to end the early slide, Pacific then reeled off four consecutive wins and won seven out of its next nine games. That stretch featured a 78-73 upset of top SEC program Florida at home; that win was the highlight of the season for the next few months. A 72-67 win over CSU Fullerton to open Big West play brought the Tigers' record to 7-5.

During a 63-56 loss at CSU Northridge, several Pacific players had to leave the game with an illness, and it was later revealed that half of the team played with flu-like symptoms and had to be hospitalized. The illness would spread to the entire team; even head coach Lynne Roberts could not escape the virus. The team sickness forced the cancellation of Pacific's next game against Long Beach State. Fortunately for everyone involved, a few days of rest and medicine was enough to bring the Tigers back to health.

Pacific finished tied with UC Irvine and UC Davis for third place in the Big West. Due to tiebreakers, Pacific was dropped to the fifth seed for the Big West Tournament and was set for an opening round showdown with the fourth-seeded Aggies.

The Tigers built a big lead and held off a late rally to upend Davis 59-51 on its home court to set up a showdown with UC Santa Barbara in the semifinals. Santa Barbara put forth its best shooting performance of the season and took the battle 84-66.

Pacific was invited to participate in the 2012 Women's National Invitational Tournament, which featured the best teams that did not make the 2012 Women's NCAA Tournament. Thrilled to participate in their first postseason tournament since 1995, the Tigers learned that their first round opponent would be Arizona State.

While Santa Barbara was being dominated by eventual champion #1 Baylor in the NCAA Tournament, Pacific scored the biggest win in program history, using a surge at the end of the first half to blow by Arizona State 77-62. With the win, Pacific advance to play San Diego in the second round and recorded the second win against a BCS school of the season.

Pacific's amazing season would come to an end against San Diego, as the Tigers fell in an 83-75 affair. In a somewhat controversial game, Pacific was whistled for a foul 32 times during the game, leading to 49 foul shots for San Diego. That total is three fouls short of the all-time high for a WNIT game, with the first being a 2007 battle which lasted three overtimes. Pacific, meanwhile, attempted just 21 free throws on 16 fouls.

With the loss, the Tigers ended the season, for real, with an 18-14 record, the program's first ever 18-win season. The season spelled the final chapter of the career of Christina Thompson, c/o '12. While Thompson's presence in the paint will be sorely missed, Pacific will enter the 2012-13 season with high hopes for an even better result.

Alex Edfort Wins Big West Championship

ENTERING THE final round of the 2012 Big West Championship Tuesday, Pacific's Alex Edfort, c/o '13, held a slim one-stroke lead in the Individual Championship. Edfort put up the best round of the championship, using a -5 final round to claim the 2012 Big West Individual Championship.

Edfort finished at -13 over the three-day tournament, five strokes ahead of second place Mark Anguiano of CSU Fullerton.

The Pacific junior's only real stumble came on the first hole of Day 1, which ended in a bogey on the par 4 hole. From there, Edfort took control, scoring birdies on the 7th,

Craig Sanders / The Record

8th, 14th, 15th, and 18th holes to take the Day 1 lead at -4.

Edfort reversed the first day's start on Day 2 with a birdie on the first hole. Though he shot a -3 through the first 17 holes, Edfort found himself in second place behind Anguiano at the start of the 18th hole. Edfort took back the lead with an eagle on the par 5 18th to finish the round at a -4 (67) and -8 overall.

Day 3 was pure domination from Edfort, as the Tiger used an eagle on the par 5 4th to catapult himself to a bogey-free, -5 round, the best round of any individual in any three rounds of the championship.

The win is Pacific's first individual title since Florian Bruhns and Jason Preeo went back-to-back from 1997-1998.
